

Puka, the tractor and the bees

Synopsis

It didn't seem it would be an especially exciting day for the dog Puka. After all, it was just the family excursion to the mountain. However, everything would be different this time. At first, everything went as usual until its people began to behave a little foolish. Only Puka continued with its four legs on the ground and tried, using his infallible sense of smell, to keep some order. But although Puka strove to keep the situation under control, its wild human pack began to worry her seriously. Maybe they were not taking her concern seriously?

So, Puka had to see how the tractor tour ended in catastrophe. A good ending catastrophe at last, after all! Indeed, they played with a stick, a few worms were eaten, strange dreams were had, bees attacked, circus acts were done by bike, they drive a tractor through dangerous places, they flew like dragonflies, there was blood, but in the end, everything was taken care of as they could, and they made new plans for the next year.

This story is not intended to give lessons. It doesn't even taught what should not be done. At most, it shows that sometimes it is worth it to tread a little more carefully. But if they had behaved more warily, no one would care about Puka's nose.
